NEW ZEALAND HAS
A NEW CHARTER ACT

of the Colony to that effect. The borough corporation is not affected by the consolidation and remains intact as a controlling power in the newformed city. The section also provides for alterations in the boundaries of boroughs, and places the power to change the limits of a borough corporation in the hands of the people, and gives them the right to do nearly everything they please in this respect which does not conflict with the general provisions of the act.

Division 5 is of General Powers.
The section treats of the general powers possessed by the borough or city council in the administration of the rules of government. Under it the council is given the power to enter into any contract made necessary in the course of administration. The act also hedges the people about with several wholesome precautionary checks on the sweeping power thus accorded the council.

One peculiar provision of this section is the paragraph referring to the accomplishment of public works on the co-operative plan. It specially gives the power to the Council to make such contracts and allows them the discretion of their own wills in doing the work. It requires no bids, no statement of value or amount of the work and does away with the intervention of a contractor. The wages to be paid for such work by the council is only fixed by the custom of the country.

The scheme seems to be a trifle too much like idealism to be entirely practicable in this country but under the conditions in New Zealand it is said to work to perfection.

The council is given the power to lease desirable property for a long term of years but the limit is placed at years without giving the lessee any privilege of a renewal, or for a shorter period under a stronger tenure. The final section of the division reads as follows: "The council may compound, compromise or submit to arbitration any claim, debt, sum of money, action, or demand made, owing, or brought either by or against the corporation."

Division 6 deals with the particular powers of the council.
This is by far the largest chapter in the act and takes up the description of the working rules of the governing body in the borough and cities with regard to the various special and particular acts required of them. Under this division the corporation is given practically the absolute right of ownership in the streets, highways, boundaries, roads, ferries, bridges, channels, drainage and sanitation both public and private, waterworks, protective works, the supply of electric light and power and also gas and a hundred and one other utilities.

Some of these valuable rights still vest in the municipalities of the United States but the residents of New Zealand have them all in the treasury of their commonwealths. The New Zealand corporations have the power to do pretty much as they please with regard to these utilities and in addition have the supervision of nearly everything which has a bearing on the public health, pleasure and recreation.
One radical innovation is outlined in this section of the Act: A system of model lodging-houses for working people of both sexes, to be operated under the ownership and control of the council of a borough or city, is provided. Under this system, a small fee is charged against the lodgers and the income goes into the District Fund.
The Act also makes similar arrangements for the accommodation of families.

Division 7 is of the general provisions as to private works. In it, the council is given the power to require private persons to make such alterations and repairs in their property as seem necessary for the safety of public health and comfort. It provides that if the owner of private property does not comply with the orders of the council or is unknown to that body, that the council may then take up the work and charge the amount expended and a slight penalty for non-compliance against the property, where it must remain as a lien until paid by the owner or satisfied out of the proceeds of the sale of the property.
The final division of the Act treats of subsidiary and incidental provisions. It covers everything not provided for by the other divisions and has several elastic clauses which can be made to apply to anything the lawmakers may have overlooked.

Danger of Colds and La Grippe.

The greatest danger from colds and la grippe is their resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken when danger will be avoided.
Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for these diseases we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous sickness. It will cure a cold or an attack of la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Druggists,
